Electric Vehicles: Pros and Cons

Whether your motivation is a cheaper daily commute or concern for the environment, an electric vehicle is a compelling solution. Spending about 4 cents a mile for electricity is money in the bank compared to 84 cents per mile for gas. Plus, electric vehicles don't need oil changes and other maintenance items, saving an additional $330 a year.

These energy-efficient vehicles help reduce dependency on oil and produce fewer emissions that contribute to climate change. Automakers have expanded their lineups in recent years, including sedans, SUVs and – coming soon – pickups with towing capacity that rival their gas-powered counterparts.

These benefits help explain why 40 million Americans are open to purchasing an electric vehicle. Yet electric vehicle adoption in the U.S. remains low, hindered by consumer perceptions of the electric experience. We asked electric vehicle owners to weigh in on the pros and cons of electric vehicle adoption.

How do I find a charging station?

The biggest perceived drawback of electric vehicles is the fear of being stranded. AAA's research found that availability of charging stations is a concern for 58% of consumers, and more than half of Americans worry they'll run out of charge while driving. It's understandable, given that we are used to seeing a gas station on nearly every corner.

Once they purchased an electric vehicle, 77% of owners realized there is no cause for "range anxiety" or concern about running out of charge. Electric vehicle owners drive on average 39 miles a day, and do three-quarters of their charging at home. In fact, 43% of electric vehicle owners said they drive more now than when they owned a gas-powered vehicle.

Can you take a road trip in an electric vehicle?

For an electric vehicle novice, it may be hard to grasp the concept of using this type of vehicle as your only source of transportation, especially for long-distance driving. Many electric vehicle owners straddle the electric/gas question by keeping a gas-powered vehicle in the garage. The reality is that 87% of dual-car owners report spending most of their time driving their electric vehicle, likely leaving their gasoline vehicle for longer road trips.

Auto manufacturers are constantly improving battery technology. Models launched in 2020 exceed 250 miles on a full charge, with some vehicles topping out at 400 miles of driving range. That's more than enough charge for a daily commute, and will easily get you to the next rest break on that long haul.

Is it worth buying an electric vehicle?

Just about every owner had concerns before buying an electric vehicle, be it charging issues, lack of choices or performance and handling. A little time behind the wheel and 96% of those skeptics are now loyal electric vehicle enthusiasts.

Misconceptions about electric vehicles may be holding buyers back. But, the more real-world experience consumers can have with electric vehicles, the more likely they are to see going green as a viable option. https://blog.wa.aaa.com/green-technology/electric -vehicles-pros-and-cons/?cmpid=int_eml_out_nxx-0322-gas-prices

Executive Director's Corner: Cherie Coldwell

We Did It! We got through winter and COVID and are stronger for the experience. I hope you can find the positive as we shake off the doldrums and move into a period of rebirth and renewal. Spring brings so many wonderful opportunities for change and growth, sometimes bittersweetly. For instance, it is my sad duty to inform you of some personnel changes here at SASI. Firstly, Alice Wallace, board member and prior interim Executive Director, has decided to step down from the board of directors. Alice's many contributions to the senior center can not be understated. From clearing out the clutter and making the senior center a warm and inviting place, to making sure we always had meals available, even during the closures, Alice gave 100% of her time and talent and we will miss that passion and commitment. We wish her well as she and Lloyd set their sites on new and exciting horizons. Secondly, Susan Musson, our nutrition assistant and resident saucy minx is leaving us in April. While Susan hasn't been with SASI very long, she has had a huge impact on our mission. Her positive attitude and wicked sense of humor has made working here so much fun. I'm also going to miss how helpful she is to our seniors and our volunteers. No task was too small for Susan, as she did everything with professionalism, a pleasant attitude, and a smile on her face. I know I speak for everyone at SASI when I say that Susan will be missed immensely. Our door is always open to you Susan. So instead of good bye, lets just say, so long for now.

I know change is difficult, but with the commitment and drive of our small but mighty team, we will weather this transition with the same excitement, optimism, and confidence that we bring to SASI everyday.

Hope to see you soon, Cherie

Make a difference where it matters to you.

Education, Arts and culture, Social Justice, Food Security. A healthy environment, or Economic opportunity. Each of us has a passion that's bigger than ourselves. We find ways to engage — to make a difference in our region in ways that feel meaningful — throughout our lives.

In our region, everyone's gifts matter.

Few of us consider ourselves wealthy. Yet most of us in Eastern Washington and North Idaho have wealth to share with our communities, especially when we look beyond cash on hand. Our potential to benefit our region through end-of-life gifts can be found in our homes and real estate, personal belongings, investments, business holdings and elsewhere. If everyone in our region planned to leave 5% of what they have, the benefit would be enormous.

If you want to support the work of a nonprofit you care about in the community, consider

Darrell Ewing Celebrates 100 Trips Around the Sun!

Darrell Ewing was born in Hunters, WA on April 25, 1922. He was born on the reservation where his grandmother, a native American, grew up. At the age of 2, Darrell and his family moved north to Bonner's Ferry where he spent the rest of his childhood and most of his adult life. Living in Bonner's Ferry was a dream come true for Darrell, where he and his friends had many a close call. From riding down the flumes at the old mill, to nearly drowning while rescuing a friend who had fallen through the ice playing hockey, Darrell and his friends were always having a little too much fun for their parents liking and that daredevil streak didn't end in childhood.

When Darrell turned 19, he enlisted in the army during WWII, and was stationed in Antigua (war is hell!). There he was assigned with the Army Corps of Engineers where became a heavy equipment operator, a skill that served a career spanning 40 years. While stationed in Antigua, Darrell's daredevil streak was on full display as he was tasked to repair a broken pulley on a flag pole that was 70 feet high. The boom was too short and Darrell had to build a small platform so that he could climb on top of the pole and reattach the pulley. Something he had to do twice!

After returning to Bonner's Ferry, Darrell put the skills he learned in the Army to good use and worked as a heavy machine operator for most of the major lumber companies in the area, the last 25 years with the Pack River Lumber Company until his retirement in 1965. But that's not all he did, Darrell literally began dating the girl next door, someone he didn't know well until he returned home from the war. Alice and Darrell were married in 1946 and spent 64 wonderful years together, raising 3 sons; Paul, Kenneth, and Darrell Jr. Alice and Darrell loved to dance and would travel all over the inland northwest attending dances as far north as Canada and as far east as Montana. Back in the old days, "there used to be 5 or 6 places (in Sandpoint) that you could go to dance", states Darrell, and he and Alice tripped the light fantastic whenever possible.

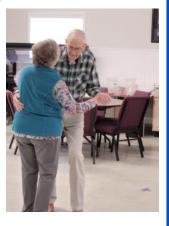

After Alice passed away in 2010, Darrell continued to dance at the senior center, partnering with anyone interested in cutting a rug. At one of the dances, Darrell spotted a lovely woman standing in the lobby, and before she could even take her coat off, Darrell asked her to dance. Darrell and Sally spent most of the evening dancing together and when he asked her out to the next dance, he bought her a dozen long stem roses. That was 11 years ago and they're still going strong. As Sally said, "what can a girl do"?

I think there is a metaphor here about dancing and life, love, and happiness. Perhaps its that in order to be in a successful relationship, you have to be in sync with your partner. Someone who will waltz through life with you, enjoying the music and the physical connection, timing, and rhythm. "Love is a constant process of tuning in, connecting, missing and misreading cues, disconnecting, repairing, and finding deeper connection. It is a dance of meeting and parting and finding each other again. Minute to minute and day to day." – Dr. Sue Johnson

We should all be so lucky. Happy 100th Birthday Darrell. I hope you never stop dancing.
